Julie A. Blum joined Hollingsworth LLP in 1990 following a clerkship with the Honorable Mildred M. Edwards of the District of Columbia Superior Court. Her practice specializes in defending corporate clients in complex mass tort products liability litigation in state and federal proceedings. She is experienced in mass tort claims, including serial litigation, multidistrict litigation, and class action litigation, and has assisted in the oversight and management of large scale litigation involving a wide range of pharmaceutical products and compounds. In addition, she has managed pre-trial fact discovery in products liability and mass tort litigation for more than twenty years. She also has experience in commercial contract litigation.

Ms. Blum has spoken on defense strategies before national pharmaceutical conference attendees, and was a regular contributor to the Products Liability Law & Strategy reporter, published by Law Journal Newsletters.

Ms. Blum serves on the Government Relations Committee of the Tuberous Sclerosis Alliance and is a past co-chair of that committee. She is a past member of the Board of Directors of the Tuberous Sclerosis Alliance and the Board of Directors of the Tuberous Sclerosis Endowment Fund.
